

Pardee Homes Demonstrates Leadership with Safe Building Practices

Pardee Homes prevents falls by requiring equipment such as this fall protection harness, self-retracting lifeline and ladder clamp. Hard hats, gloves and dust particle masks, as well as ongoing education, offer additional protection to employees and subcontractors.

California OSHA Voluntary Protection Programs Award

Formerly the Golden State Award for Safety, Pardee Homes is the first homebuilder to earn this designation, which it has held every year since 2003.

NAHB Safety Award for Excellence Home Builder Safety Professional of the Year - 2008 and 2009

Safety first.

Pardee Homes conducts business in a way that maintains its integrity and gives priority to the health and safety of its employees, subcontractors and homebuyers. The company's health and safety vision is to be the safest homebuilding company in all areas that it operates.

Because safety protocols fit hand-in-hand with sound building practices, providing a safe working environment also fortifies the quality of the homes built by Pardee. A home built according to safety specifications is almost certainly a better built home.

The first homebuilder to receive OSHA recognition for its safety practices, Pardee Homes is also the first builder to receive the Voluntary Protection Programs designation for nine years running. This designation from California's Division of Occupational Safety and Health recognizes effective worksite-based safety and health.

Through ongoing education, Pardee Homes aims to prevent all incidents by eliminating all potential hazards and unsafe acts.

Ladder guards provide a safe hand hold for workers getting on and off a roof.

Pardee Homes uses interior scaffolding instead of ladders in open areas like this stairwell, which offers a safer working platform.
